him. The work was started by seven drillers of the Kentucky Rock Asphalt Company, but it was halted after a short time. It was feared the vibration would dislodge huge rocks above Collins and crush him to death.

Party Goes In.
It was then decided to send rescuers in to him. I went first, starting in at 5:30 o'clock. In the next hour we made more progress than had been made in any single attempt before, and our waning confidence came back.

Time after time large and small rocks were passed along the human chain and out of the cave, which trapped Collins at 10 o'clock Friday morning after the first attempt to explore it.

A minute seems an hour in there, and the water-sharp-

Keep a careful record of your food bills for a month. You will see that for a small fraction of this sum you can keep your refrigerator filled with ice.

Compare this with the cost of food wasted every month in the "kitchen cooler." The answer is—ICE IS A REAL ECONOMY AS WELL AS A PROTECTION TO HEALTH.

HOW TWO WOMEN AVOIDED OPERATIONS

The Following Letters of Mrs. Thurston and Mrs. Beard Carry an Encouraging Message to Other Sick Women

MRS. ETHEL THURSTON
224 N. FINE STREET, LIMA, OHIO
Lima, Ohio.—"I want to tell you how your medicine has helped me. For weeks I suffered with awful pain from inflammation and I was in such misery that I had to bend double to get relief. I could not be touched or jarred, had awful pain all over my abdomen and could not touch my feet. I began with the liquid and it helped me some, then you advised me to take the tablet form and I began to improve rapidly. I have gained in weight from 105 to 170 pounds. I recommend it to all women with this trouble."

Church Members Pray for Collins

Battle Creek, Mich., Feb. 3 (AP)—The congregation of the Central Christian Church here united tonight with the Rev. George W. Titus in a special prayer service for Floyd Collins, imprisoned in Sand Cave, Kentucky. A general prayer service, bringing together all denominations of Battle Creek, is being arranged.

ened rocks cut like a knife. But the numbness has its compensations. It keeps one from feeling the cuts and bruises.

All of us were exhausted, finally, and the word was passed back to crawl out. The air outside revived us quickly and, after a cup of coffee and a sandwich I crawled back in for the second time.

On this trip I took with me a pint bottle of milk and a small quantity of whisky, which Collins had requested when I last saw him.

"I'm cold all over," he told me. "I believe a drink of liquor would help."

Drank Whisky First.

He drank the whisky first while I held the container to his lips, and then asked for the milk. It required some time for him to consume it all, as he is not able to eat or drink fast. He is very weak after his more than 115-hour imprisonment, and shows plainly the suffering from his left foot, which is held in a small crevice by a huge rock.

The whisky and milk seemed to help him a great deal, because he volunteered to talk.

"I'm not afraid to die," he said. "I've no reason to be. I believe I would go to Heaven. But I don't believe I'm going to die. I feel I'm going to be taken out alive and that I'll not lose my foot."

The talking seemed to weary Collins, so I started out. I was forced to rest after crawling about fifty feet. This breathing spell enabled me to reach a small compartment, about mid-way in the entrance to the prisoner, in fairly quick time.

Here I stopped again for several minutes before resuming the most grueling part of the trip. I was mighty glad to be hauled out of the entrance.

It was dark when I felt the fresh air again, and, although others said it was cold, it seemed unusually warm to me after nearly an hour in the cavern.

As quickly as I could I took off the water-soaked overalls. I was wearing and drank another cup of coffee. It warmed me immediately, enabling me to enjoy a rest.

I was sufficiently refreshed in a short time to start in on the third trip. This time it was to be work, and each of us took a deep breath as we were lowered into the tunnel.

Prepare to Use Jack.

A few minutes after the last man was lowered I started back to him the first big rock taken out this trip.

Meanwhile, workmen outside are preparing a jack, which will be passed back to me and which, I believe, will enable us to free Collins.

In talking to Collins today I told him it might be possible to save him by using a small automobile jack and using it to raise, a few inches, the stone which is holding his foot. He took to it at once. Unfortunately, there was no jack small enough, but a regular jack is being cut down small enough to be used.

It is only one more plan, but I believe it will work. We are to try it, anyway, as soon as I can get it in place under the rock.

LITTLE PROGRESS MADE.

Collins Still Hopeful: Cheered By His Discovery.

By JOHN L. ESCHRIK.

Staff Correspondent of The Courier-Journal.

Cave City, Ky., Feb. 3.—

Strangely enough, almost inconceivably strange, Floyd Collins is still alive and still hopeful, though 8 o'clock tonight ended the 106th hour that has elapsed since he was pinned at 10 o'clock Friday morning in a sandstone vice made by the cave which he had just discovered.

The rescue work goes on but the progress to those outside seems infinitesimal.

Collins continues to take food taken to him by men crawling on their stomachs.

Suggestions and offers of aid, which many friends here are sending to Cave City from many places, however, have taken upon their own hands the burden of rescue. Several volunteers, including T. A. Smith, railroad master here, have reported that they have been and are being sent to the cave.

No Leadership Apparent.

The will to rescue is very evident, but the lack of leadership is depressing.

No one, citizens of Cave City declare, sufficiently is in control. Such state of affairs has developed that the rescue committee, this morning declared that the thinking of moonshine, or any other liquor, about the cave must stop. Curious crowds, however, are still coming to the cave, and the rescue work is being hampered.

The entrance to the cave, which is a small hole in the sandstone, is being worked by the rescue party. The entrance is being widened, and the rescue work is being pushed back this morning.

Collins' condition, of course, hourly becomes worse. The rescue work this afternoon, consisting of the passing of food, and the widening of the entrance, has been continued. The rescue work is being pushed back this morning.

The night of the rescuers is in itself pitiable. There is a small hole in the sandstone, and the rescue work is being pushed back this morning.

Outside, Lee Collins, his father, aged and decrepit, now listens to the reports of progress, looks at the sandstone from the vice that grips the legs of his son. His brothers also are there, waiting for the rescue work to be pushed back this morning.

Just beyond Collins, he is reported to have told those who have reached him, there is a delirium of eighty feet.

FIELDS WILL QUIZ HOLLIDAY FEB. 26

11 Charges Made Against Perry Sheriff for Misconduct in Office.

of Perry County, Kentucky, will be held in the Senate chamber at the Capitol Building, Frankfort, Ky., on February 26, 1925, beginning at 10 o'clock a. m., on said date, and continuing until completed, and you are given twenty days to prepare such defense as you desire to offer.

You are further notified that as Governor of the State of Kentucky, I will hear such matter on oral testimony and by depositions.

I, W. J. Fields, Governor of the Commonwealth of Kentucky, upon affidavit filed with me, hereby charge one, Tolbert Holliday, Sheriff of Perry County, Kentucky, with the neglect of official duty committed in the following manner and forth to wit:

First—Drunkenness, on or about August 26 and 27, 1924, in the town of Hazard, Perry County, Kentucky.

Second—Again with drunkenness on or about the middle of December, 1924, in the town of Hazard, Perry County, Kentucky.

Third—With using loud and boisterous language and cursing upon the streets in the town of Hazard, Perry County, Kentucky, the said dates heretofore stated.

Witnessed Gambling.

Fourth: That during the month of April, 1924, the said Tolbert Holliday was present at and saw a game of cards where money was bet, won and lost, and that he failed to make any arrest of any person engaged in or conducting such game, and thereby failed to perform his duty as a peace officer, or to enforce the law which it was his duty to do.

Fifth: That during the month of April, 1924, the said Tolbert Holliday engaged in a game of cards in which money was bet, won and lost, and that he failed to make any arrest of any person engaged in or conducting such game, and thereby failed to perform his duty as a peace officer, or to enforce the law which it was his duty to do.

Sixth: That during the month of April, 1924, the said Tolbert Holliday engaged in a game of cards in which money was bet, won and lost, and that he failed to make any arrest of any person engaged in or conducting such game, and thereby failed to perform his duty as a peace officer, or to enforce the law which it was his duty to do.

Seventh: That during the month of April, 1924, the said Tolbert Holliday engaged in a game of cards in which money was bet, won and lost, and that he failed to make any arrest of any person engaged in or conducting such game, and thereby failed to perform his duty as a peace officer, or to enforce the law which it was his duty to do.

Eighth: That during the month of April, 1924, the said Tolbert Holliday engaged in a game of cards in which money was bet, won and lost, and that he failed to make any arrest of any person engaged in or conducting such game, and thereby failed to perform his duty as a peace officer, or to enforce the law which it was his duty to do.

Ninth: That during the month of April, 1924, the said Tolbert Holliday engaged in a game of cards in which money was bet, won and lost, and that he failed to make any arrest of any person engaged in or conducting such game, and thereby failed to perform his duty as a peace officer, or to enforce the law which it was his duty to do.

Tenth: That during the month of April, 1924, the said Tolbert Holliday engaged in a game of cards in which money was bet, won and lost, and that he failed to make any arrest of any person engaged in or conducting such game, and thereby failed to perform his duty as a peace officer, or to enforce the law which it was his duty to do.

Eleventh: That during the month of April, 1924, the said Tolbert Holliday engaged in a game of cards in which money was bet, won and lost, and that he failed to make any arrest of any person engaged in or conducting such game, and thereby failed to perform his duty as a peace officer, or to enforce the law which it was his duty to do.

Twelfth: That during the month of April, 1924, the said Tolbert Holliday engaged in a game of cards in which money was bet, won and lost, and that he failed to make any arrest of any person engaged in or conducting such game, and thereby failed to perform his duty as a peace officer, or to enforce the law which it was his duty to do.

Thirteenth: That during the month of April, 1924, the said Tolbert Holliday engaged in a game of cards in which money was bet, won and lost, and that he failed to make any arrest of any person engaged in or conducting such game, and thereby failed to perform his duty as a peace officer, or to enforce the law which it was his duty to do.

Motor Dealers Would Make Streets Safe

Most of Responsibility Should Rest On Pedestrians, G. T. Holmes Says.

"What the automobile trade is interested in is seeing that the streets are made safe for traffic and for human life both in and out of automobiles," George T. Holmes, secretary of the Louisville Automobile Dealers' Association, said Tuesday.

"That, to be sure, is what everybody is interested in, but our interest in this general objective has business as well as humanitarian reasons back of it."

George T. Holmes. That much should be understood in any discussion of the commercial angle of traffic safety.

"Pedestrians cross intersections of the street and crossing in front of heavy traffic with studied indifference to safety is as great a crime as driving a car recklessly. There is plenty of both."

"The difference is there are 300,000 people here who find it convenient to commit the first, while there are 40,000 who find it possible to commit the second crime."

"By the way, when the term 'motor accident' is used, it is not meant to include accidents which occur when other elements enter, sometimes principally. Why not traffic accidents? The suggestion of safety is in fact, however, suggests the advisability of care to all who may cause the accident. Besides that, it is only reasonable."

Plans for the March 1925 cruise to be conducted by the Louisville and Cincinnati Steamship Company by boat and motor launch, will be held at the Louisville Hotel, Louisville, Ky., on Tuesday, Feb. 3, 1925.
