

LESSON DRAWN FROM SAND CAVE

Efforts to Rescue Floyd Collins Held Picture of Service.

HEROIC ACTS CITED

The dramatic scenes at Sand Cave, where Floyd Collins' plight as a prisoner, held by a rock vise far underground, has caught and held the nation's attention, furnished the theme for a four-minute talk over W.H.A.S. radio, Tuesday night, Saturday afternoon by Mrs. Frances Carre.

Mrs. Carre said: "The tragedy occurred at Sand Cave, though local, speaks in universal terms, telling the world how widespread is the love and service offered by all to one in misfortune. As the young newspaper reporter, as well as all others, we witness the forgetfulness of self which is willing to have death time after time, the greatest service one can render another. As Christ has said, 'Greater love hath no man than that he lay down his life for his friend.' In these men is seen the spirit of the martyrs, who for sake all, even losing sight of the value of their own lives, in proving the beauty of service. Such people fulfill the great commandment, to love your neighbor as yourself, and in so doing obey the greatest one also, that of loving God above all."

Press Spread News.

The power of the press carried the news of the explorer's accident to all America, and stirred souls to concerted action and offers of service. Thousands of prayers have been offered, money has been forwarded, doctors and surgeons have offered their services freely; expert engineers, miners and soldiers sent to the scene by government officials; all in response to the call for help from one practically unknown man. And while many have shown these acts of heroism, brotherly love and selflessness, the victim himself in his great trouble has been serving all mankind. "If man has lived only a few years and the tree of life has attained to fruition, he has obtained spiritual success." And how wonderfully this has been demonstrated in these last few days by Floyd Collins. Though he lives or dies, his life has borne fruit, for by his courage under torture, his unswerving faith in God, his resignation to the Divine Will, he has shown others how to live and die. Man is not man until he show forth the attributes of God. And one of the greatest of these is service. For God is the generous provider, and man can praise and thank Him only by serving humanity.

Service Held Ideal.

The discoveries and inventions of our modern scientists in this last half century are for the benefit of mankind; and all are realizing today that "service—social, moral, intellectual—service—must be the sole aim of a sane man."

As the white corpuscles give their lives to repair injury and restore health to the body, so the great white corpuscles of the human soul, service to humanity properly.

Abdul Kaba has said, "How noble and excellent is man, if he only attain to that state for which he was designed. And how mean and contemptible, if he close his eyes to the public weal, and spend his precious capacities on personal and selfish ends. The greatest happiness lies in the happiness of others." The keynote of the world's progress today is service.

Then "let us have a life which is a collective center of the beneficial forces, a life of sympathy, of brotherhood, of celestial brotherhood."

CHEST OFFERING CATHOLICS HELP

Barnes Denies Rumor That Community Body Neglects Certain Religions.

James P. Barnes, president of the Community Chest, today issued a statement denying the false impression that Catholic individuals and families are not aided by the various Chest organizations.

There are Catholics, Protestants and Jews on the Executive Committee and Board of Directors of the Chest, and on the boards of the forty-two member organizations, Mr. Barnes said. Only a few of the organizations are sectarian, and most of these make no distinction as to the religion of those whom they serve, he declared.

In pointing out the effective service carried on among the Catholics of Louisville, the Chest president added the support of every citizen, whatever his or her religion. The Chest's welfare work, he declared, is for all the people, and not for any particular race, class or creed.

Helps All Alike.

The Family Service Organization, one of the largest in the Chest, reported that in its Western district, out of 195 families, who stated their religion, seventy-one were Catholic, or about 36 per cent. These figures, which would be a good basis for comparative estimate in other districts, show the work which the Family Service Organization is doing among Catholic families. The Boy Scouts, Louisville Council, enrolled 125 Catholic boys out of a total enrollment of 1,133 last year. At their camp near Harrods Creek, ninety Catholic boys attended out of a total attendance of 636.

The Children's Protective Association, out of a total of 2,093 individual cases for neglected and Catholic children where both parents were Catholic, and eighteen where one parent was Catholic. These figures are for the year 1924.

The Public Health Nursing Association estimated that 1,000 of their cases were Catholics. They cared for 10,479 persons last year. They cannot give accurate figures because they do not record the religion of the cases they assist, since their nurses give care to anyone requiring aid.

High Percentage Shown.

Neighborhood House last year enrolled 716 Catholic individuals representing 320 families, out of a total enrollment of 2,574 individuals. In the Fresh Air Home, 121 Catholic individuals representing fifty families were given vacations out of a total attendance of 281.

The Eleanor Tarrant Little Foundation out of 651 children enrolled in day sessions, reported that thirty-five were Catholic. These figures are for work done in the public schools during 1924.

The Psychological Clinic reported that out of 447 cases examined last year, 25 per cent of those whose religion was stated, were Catholic.

Of the other thirty-five member organizations, no statistics can be given, because no records are kept of the religion of those served. Since they serve those of all religions alike, the Louisville Tuberculosis Association, the Children's Free Hospital, the Salvation Army, the Legal Aid Society, the Children's Bureau and the Hospital Social Service Association, are organizations which give a large amount of service to Catholic families.

The remainder of the Community Chest agencies render aid to all those who come within their scope, or if the necessary aid is not within their individual line, they manage to obtain, through those members which specialize in community cooperation, the assistance needed.

GERMAN TREATY IS PUT BEFORE SENATE

Reservation to Permit Tariff On Shipping After One Year Proposed.

Washington, Feb. 7 (AP)—The German commercial treaty came before the Senate today in executive session. Chairman Borah of the Foreign Relations Committee, calling up the pact in order to complete the preliminary stages of Senate consideration by a first reading and brief discussion to sound sentiment.

The Foreign Relations Committee has recommended a reservation approved by the State Department, under which on ninety days' notice after the treaty has been in force, the United States could create a tariff of duties in favor of its shipping as against German shipping.

This reservation meets the opposition on both sides of the chamber because it leaves to the executive a declaration of this policy. Chairman Borah, of the committee, and others want to leave that question solely with Congress.

McKELLAR WOULD CUT FRAUD FUND

War Prosecutions Gain Little, He Says; "Money Thrown Away."
Washington, Feb. 7 (AP)—Reduction of the $1,000,000 appropriation for prosecution of war frauds by the Department of Justice to $500,000, was proposed today by Senator McKellar, Democrat, Tennessee, as an amendment to the Department of Justice supply bill.

Declaring the "twenty-six lawyers and innumerable high-paid accountants" handling these cases had won only three judgments and collected about $170,000 while costing the Government $700,000 so far this year, Senator McKellar said this appropriation amounted to "throwing away $1,000,000 of the public's money."

The $1,000,000 item was approved by the House.

Take baked oysters for instance: Bake oysters have the appetizing appearance of fried oysters with none of the greasy flavor they have. Here's the way:

One-third cup of butter;
1 pint selected oysters;
1-8 cupfuls of dried bread crumbs;
1-2 teaspoonfuls salt;
Dash of pepper;
1 egg beaten and diluted with tablespoonful of water.

Wash and drain the oysters, but do not let stand in water; mix salt, pepper and bread crumbs; melt the butter in a saucepan; mix seasoned crumbs with butter; dip each oyster in crumbs, then in diluted egg and then again in crumbs.
