STRESS CLEAN ELECTIONS

community, honest elections and faithful performance of official duties. John J. Davis, chairman of the Democratic City and County Executive Committee, then introduced David R. Castleman, attorney for the contestants in the suit. Mr. Davis said few of the citizens realized the tremendous work necessary in furthering and prosecuting the suit.

Mr. Castleman said that both the lower and the Court of Appeals acted as a unit in deciding that the Republican organization of Louisville was without character. He said that the citizens can only have honest elections through the support of a political organization "such as we have." The court decision, he said, did not mean that the Democratic party had been exalted, but it imposed upon the party a duty to show its merit and virtue.

The court has not decided, and the public has not decided that the party is sincere in its efforts toward good government, he said, but the office holders under the mandate will have to show by their actions in office that they are worthy of the public confidence.

"Clean Elections." Allen P. Dodd, also counsel for the successful contestants, said the occasion was one for solemnity rather than jollification. The successful ending of the contest, he said, meant that now the candidates are called on to perform. The party co-operation has been thorough through the long contest, Mr. Dodd continued, and he urged that all Democrats show their appreciation by upholding the hands of the men "you have seen fit to put into office."

"Bear in mind," he said in conclusion, "that the Democrats can only help in this city and county by holding clean elections in the future."

Governor Fields told his hearers that he had come to the aid of the link in making the government of Louisville Democratic. The great outpouring of Democrats, the Governor continued, was indicative of the fact that the Democrats had enough of corruption in elections and are determined to remove the stains of corruption from the city left by the elections of the past.

He related how he had studied the record in the contest case in an effort to determine whether the successful contestants had been worthy of the offices they sought and whether they, or their agents, had participated in fraud. He said he would have appointed another set of officers had the record contained any hint of irregularity on their part.

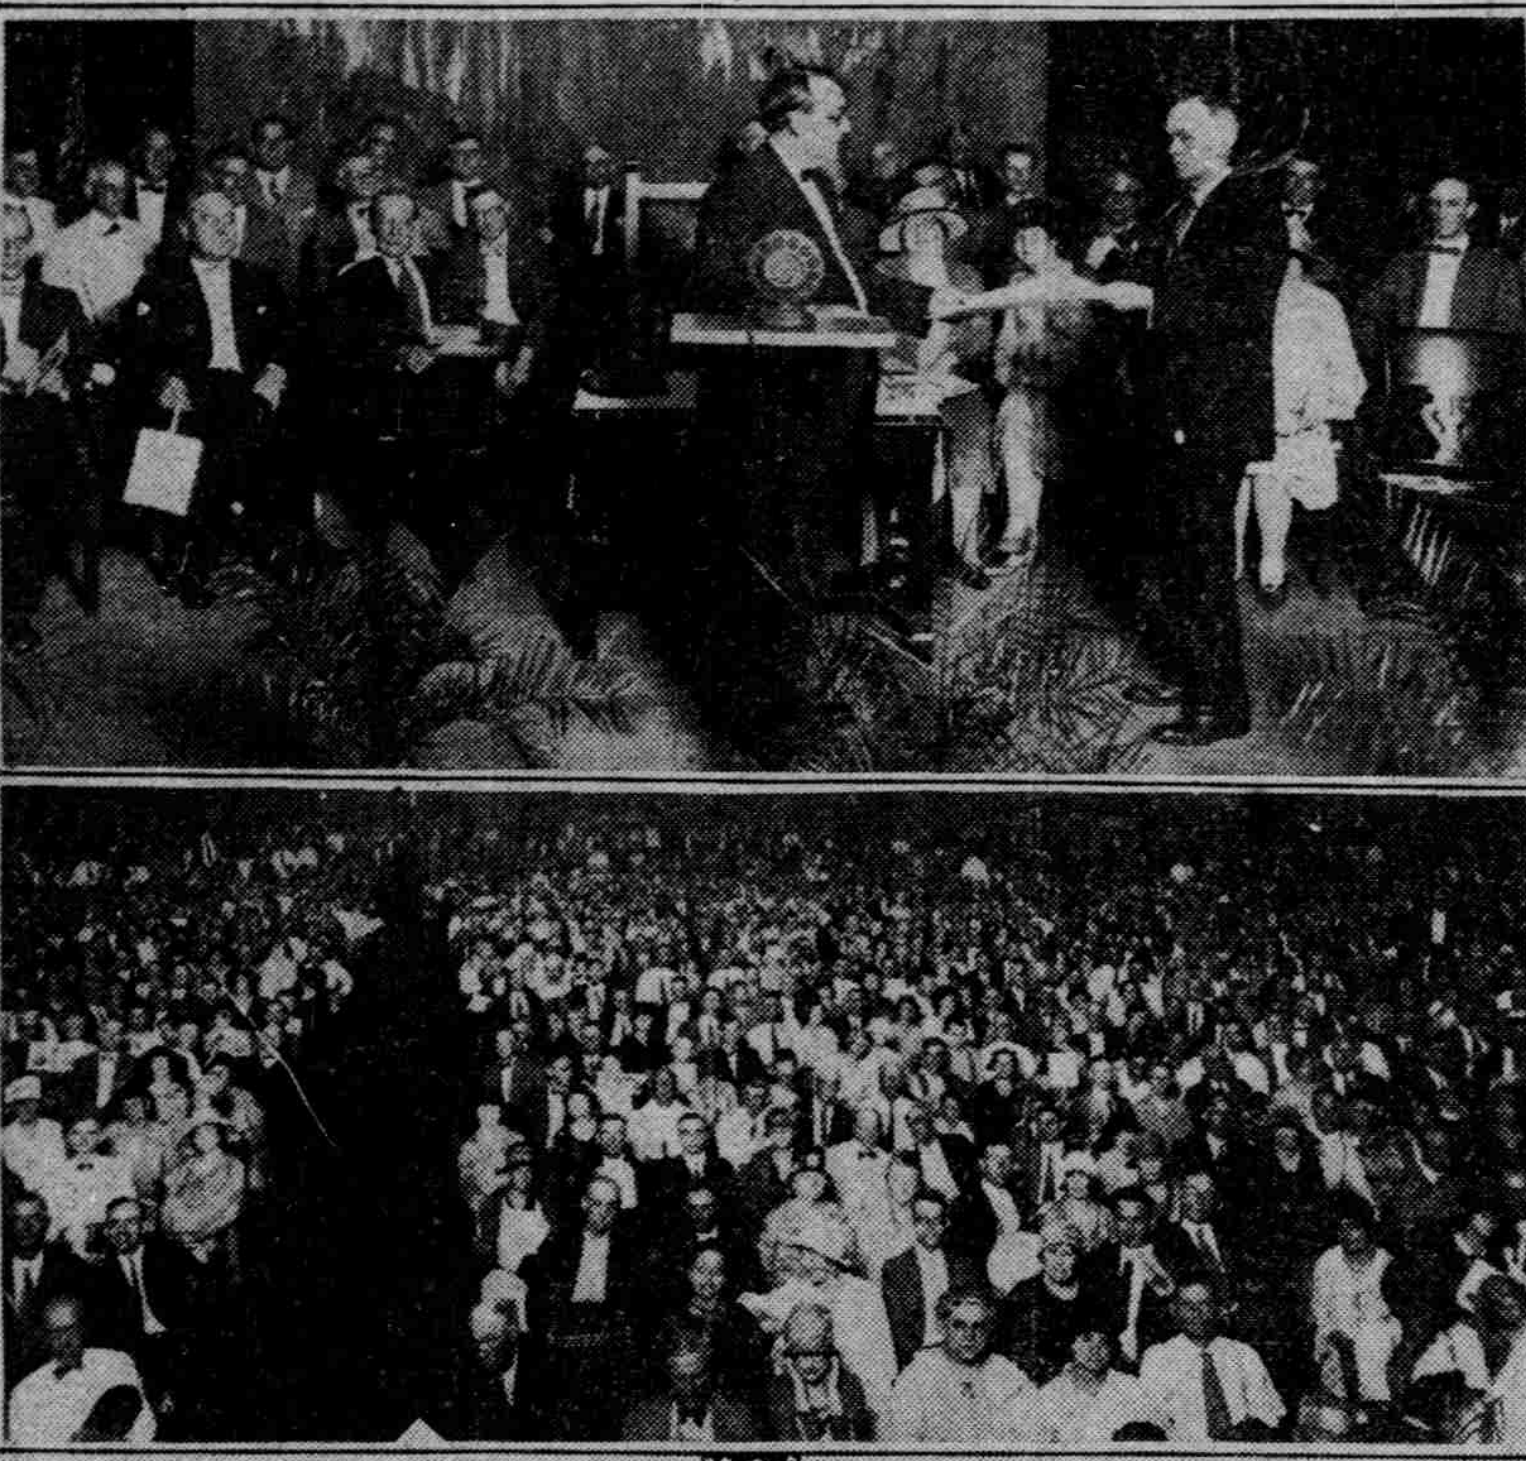

O'Neal Gets Ovation. The Governor asked for co-operation and harmony in the party. He said the contestants must give good government in Louisville if justice and decency is to prevail.

He then handed the commissions to Judge O'Neal and the other officers. Judge O'Neal was acclaimed as he rose. He said he had talked, he thought, to everyone in the audience, and if he hadn't, he expected to in the next two or three days, and found it impossible to make a speech. The success of the contest suit, he said, was due to the united efforts not only of the Democrats, but of all citizens interested in clean elections. He promised clean elections, saying, "I will live by that and die by it if necessary."

"I want to know what is going on," the Mayor designate said, "and will act on the information." Unless the Democratic party can give honest elections and good government, then it is idle for any man to fool with either party.

"It is too late for preaching," Judge

SCENES of the Democratic "jollification" held Saturday night at the Jefferson County Armory when the 1925 candidates received their commissions and Mayor-Elect Joseph T. O'Neal named the members of his official family.

O'Neal said, "We want to practice now."

Others Make Talks.

The crowd wanted more speeches, and persuaded Ben F. Ewing, new County Judge; Lawrence S. Poston, new Judge of the Police Court, and Lawrence S. Grauman, new Prosecuting Attorney of the Police Court, to make brief talks. Then the crowd, not satisfied with brief talks, called again for Governor Fields. He urged adjournment.

The commissions delivered by the Governor went to Judge O'Neal, Mayor; Mr. Ewing, Mr. Poston and Mr. Grauman; Magistrates J. E. Hodgins and Edward Heger; Board of Park Commissioners, consisting of Arthur Tabb, C. T. Minor, O. M. Vasson, Harry T. Huff and Eugene A. Converse, Jr.; Aldermen, George W. Webb, N. Gray Rochester, John F. Singhiser, Mrs. William H. Miller, R. Ray Head, Lowry Watkins, Ernest N. Menar, Ed Korb, Charles S. Potter, Mrs. Thomas B. Talbot, Carl A. Jackman, B. J. Campbell, Sr.; Councilmen, Warren D. Williams, Henry W. Krauth, Frank Akers, Meyer Victor, William M. Booher, Charles Kupron, John H. Tugle, William Ising, Nellie McEwing, James B. Fritz, Antonio Ciresi, John E. Brachey, Miss Adrienne Thum, John Hennsey, George J. Denner, Emanuel Stocker, Matthew H. Goez, George W. Clarke, Sr., George W. Ford, John M. Donahue, William P. Schott, E. T. Harrison, Mrs. Spalding E. Michel, Reginald K. Walker.

The other candidates on the 1925 ticket will be appointed by Judge O'Neal and the county candidates by Judge Ewing.

Collins' Casket Owner Indicted

Horse Cave Dentist Charged With "Mutilating Grave;" Trial In November.

Brownsville, Ky., June 25 (AP)—Dr. Harry B. Thomas, Horse Cave dentist, was indicted by the Edmonson grand jury today on a charge of "mutilating the grave of Floyd Collins." Trial was set for the November term of court.

Dr. Thomas, who purchased Crystal Cave from the Collins family some months ago, also is being sued for $50,000 damages for removing the casket from the grave to the interior of the cave, allegedly for exhibition purposes.

The Collins brothers also sought an injunction to restrain the dentist from exhibiting the casket. Hearing on the injunction was to have been held today, but was postponed indefinitely because all the witnesses in the case had not been summoned.
